

Colombia: Women-Led Peace Building and Food Sovereignty

June 21 - June 30, 2018

This delegation will strive to ask certain questions about peace in Colombia: Can peace be achieved without women, Afro-Colombian and Indigenous communities being integrally involved? How do grassroots social movements challenge the bilateral model? Participants on this delegation will witness the ways in which Colombian women are building peace in their communities, and are resisting current military and free trade policies through food sovereignty initiatives.

Participants on this delegation will:

- Meet with a wide range of Colombians including community leaders and growers, displaced persons, and human rights defenders.
- Explore the connections between food sovereignty, free trade, and corporate policies
- Discover the impacts that U.S. policies have on Colombian women and farmers

Total Cost: $1400 plus international airfare

Delegation fee covers all meals, lodging, interpreters, and transportation within Colombia, along with extensive reading and activist tools. Fundraising support and scholarships may be available.

Application and $150 deposit due April 21, 2018

Remainder of payment due May 21, 2018

For more information contact delegation coordinator Liz Moldan,

liz@witnessforpeace.org